

Abstract

A resuscitation device for automatic compression of a victim's chest using a compression belt operably attached to a platform upon which a patient rests. In use, the compression 5 belt is wrapped around the patient and at least one spindle operably attached to the platform.